ABOUT TRUSTMARK UNIVERSAL LIFE

Universal life insurance is similar to other kinds of permanent life insurance (like whole life). It's designed to last a lifetime (so your price will never increase due to age), it builds cash value and it pays your beneficiaries when you die. There are also some important differences, though:

- Universal life is flexible, because you can adjust your premium payments within a certain range and still keep your policy in force.
- Missing a single payment won't automatically cancel your policy.
- Trustmark Universal Life also offers benefits that you can receive while you're still living.

Permanent life insurance like Trustmark Universal Life gives you a solid base to build on. Since you own your policy, you can keep it for life, even if you change jobs or retire. And if you need extra protection (for example, while you have a mortgage to pay on a home), term life insurance can help you close the gap.
